

Maps & Getting Around

The Lleyn is a small peninsula about 8 miles across at the widest part. There is a dividing line which run from Caernarfon in the North West to Porthmadoc in the South East. In fact, the A487 follows the line although some argue that the A4085 is a closer fit. You may decide for yourself.

Here are a few useful links to local maps.

Google Maps where you can see both a road map and satellite image of the Lleyn. The Lleyn Webcam location is also marked on this map.

StreetMap where you can get a more detailed view including road and street names.
